The maintenance of temples is not generally considered a legitimate object of public expenditure. It is true that many temples are, as a matter of fact, maintained partly or wholly at the expense of public funds; but with the exception of a few, they are all old institutions in whose favour grants were sanctioned in the past by competent authority and such grants are now respected, continued and administered by Govt. If however it is considered necessary to make grants from the public funds for the maintenance of temples at particular places and for the use of particular people, the principle of such grant and the limits, individual and aggregate, of such grants have first to be decided (if there are no recognised rules already on the subject) before any attempt is made to [illegible]

Expenditure on this acct can be made.
The Concession allowed by G.O. 8/12-2-05 is obviously limited to cases of endowments the objects of which come within "the category of recognised objects of expenditure from the revenues of the State". That is, the object shd be one on which it is justifiable for Govt itself to spend money. It seems hardly possible to undertake the administration of all new temples or expend public money on them. Nor is it fair to disburse money raised by general taxation on objects purely local or in gratifying the desire of an individual to perpetuate a charity which he starts from his private means and asks Govt to maintain it for all time. Permanent financial liability is involved in such proposals and it is of the utmost importance to see that the purposes are exclusively public on which the expenditure of public funds can be justified.

Note by the Private Secretary to the Under Secretary.

I inspected this to-day and explained the circumstances to Narasimha Rao. His petition originally was for a sum of Rs. 2000 for the repairs of the temple as submitted herewith. This, he will have to find funds for all purposes. The contribution suggested is Rs. 1000 as pointed out by Mr. Thomas. This will provide for current and annual repairs.

SUBJECT

5000/- and requested Government to receive this deposit and arrange for the conduct of worship in this temple supplementing the income by Government grant also. The Comptroller and Financial Secretary who was consulted is of opinion that the deposit may be accepted at 4% interest if funds sufficient for all expenditure in connection with the temple including periodical repairs &c are deposited and if the management is left entirely to Govt.

2. The Mamlatdar Superintendent, after inspection the temple on the 20th January 1909 and explaining facts to Narasimha Setty reports that the temple has been substantially built with stone, that at the time of inspection the prescribed ceremonies for the consecration of the idol were being performed on a liberal scale and that Narasimha Setty deserves every encouragement. In his petition dated 30th January 1909 he offerred to deposit a further sum of Rs 2000/- for the annual repairs of the temple out of the interest on this amount, and requested that he, during his life-time, and after him, his descendants may be appointed sole-Dharmakartas under Government so long as they manage the Institution efficiently, Government being at liberty to take any other arrangement when the management shall be unsatisfactory.

3. In these circumstances Govt. are pleased to accept the deposit of Rs. 5000/- by Narasimhasetty at 4 % per annum. The Deputy Commissioner Hassan Dt.

READ—

Petitions Nos. 226 and 730 A, dated 5th November 1908 and 30th January 1909, respectively, from Narasimhasetty of Arsikere offering for deposit at 4 per cent interest an endowment for the benefit of the Eswara temple newly constructed by him at Arsikere and requesting that Government may also sanction a grant from Muzrai Funds.

Memo, dated 4th February 1909, by the Muzrai Superintendent.

No. 1254-6—Muz. F. 397-08-3, dated Bangalore, 5th March 1909.

ORDER THEREON.—Narasimhasetty of Arsikere who has newly constructed an Eswara temple at the place, offered in his first petition to endow this institution with Rs. 3,000 and requested Government to receive this deposit and arrange for the conduct of worship in this temple supplementing the income by a Government grant also. The Comptroller and Financial Secretary who was consulted is of opinion that the deposit may be accepted at 4 per cent interest if funds sufficient for all expenditure in connection with the temple including periodical repairs, etc., are deposited and if the management is left entirely to Government.

2. The Muzrai Superintendent, after inspecting the temple on the 29th January 1909, and explaining facts to Narasimhasetty reports that the temple has been substantially built with stone, that at the time of inspection the prescribed ceremonies for the consecration of the idol were being performed on a liberal scale and that Narasimhasetty deserves every encouragement. Narasimhasetty in his second petition, dated 30th January 1909 has offered to deposit a further sum of Rs. 2,000 for the annual repairs of the temple out of the interest on this amount, and requests that he, during his lifetime, and after him, his descendants may be appointed sole Dharmadarsis under Government so long as they manage the institution efficiently, Government being at liberty to make any other arrangement when the management becomes unsatisfactory.

3. In these circumstances, Government are pleased to accept the deposit of Rs. 5,000 by Narasimhasetty at 4 per cent per annum. The Deputy Commissioner, Hassan District, will get the necessary document executed by Narasimhasetty in accordance with Rule IV of Government Notification No. Fl. 4007—Gen. Fin. 184-06, dated 12th February 1908, and will also after consulting the donor submit for the sanction of Government a scale of expenditure in this institution.

4. The temple will be taken under Government management as a Muzrai institution and the donor Narasimhasetty and after his lifetime one or more of his descendants will be appointed sole Dharmadarsis of the institution so long as they manage the institution efficiently and in accordance with the orders and instructions of Government, if any, issued from time to time.
